

Examine the Source

Select one of the Australian nurses below and use the National Archives of Australia website www.naa.gov.au to find their service records.

Answer the following questions for your chosen nurse:

1. Find and examine the individual's enlistment form.

Is this a primary or secondary source?

When was it completed?

What was the purpose of this document?

What information can you gather about this individual from their enlistment form?

Would the same information be necessary in enlistment papers today? Why/why not?

2. What other forms or documents are included in their service record?

What information can you gather about your nurse from these other documents? For example, what do they tell you about their health, death, and service awards?

3. Use the information from these sources to write, in half a page, the individual's biography. Include details of when they were born, where they came from, their family, which service they joined, where they served, what happened to them during their service, and whether they were injured or killed. You may also wish to search the Memorial's website for more information:
